

Jodi Ecker Detjen

Instructor of Management, Suffolk University
Co-Author, The Orange Line: A Woman's Guide to Integrating Career, Family and Life
Professor, Consultant, Change Agent

Jodi Detjen has been a professor of management at Suffolk University since 1999. She co-authored The Orange Line: A Woman's Guide to Integrating Career, Family and Life in May 2013. She conducts workshops, talks and consults on women's leadership development and helping organizations bring more women into leadership roles.

Formerly, Jodi was a founding partner of a boutique consulting firm, the Intrinsic Group, guiding organizations to leverage their existing people and processes to maximize performance and long term impact. Jodi has been helping develop leaders and their organizations for over 25 years. She teaches, consults and writes in areas of leadership development, systemic and organization change management, and how women can realize their power.

Jodi teaches management at the MBA, Undergraduate and Corporate Education levels both online, in the classroom and internationally. Jodi teaches the way adults learn through interaction and application of the concepts.

Prior to teaching and independent consulting, Jodi was an international management consultant based in London, England working with Global 1000 clients. Jodi focused on redesigning operations thereby realizing significant financial benefits. Her MA in International Development Policy is from Duke University and her B.Sc., from Virginia Tech in Management Science.

www.orangelinecareer.com

www.orangegroveconsulting.com

@jodidetjen

Jdetjen@suffolk.edu